NEW ALFALFA PEST CONTINUES TO SPREAD IN OLD DOMINION

The spotted alfalfa aphid, a pest of alfalfa recently found in Virginia, continues to spread, and a survey is underway to determine how extensive the damage is.

Arthur P. Morris, associate entomologist at VPI, says that farmers, county agents, and others can help by sending speicmens of aphids from alfalfa toVPI laboratories for examination - especially specimens from alfalfa that has turned brown or seems to have something wrong with it.

Soybeans are believed to be safe from large-scale corn-earworm outbreaks this year, but farmers should watch fields for another week or two to guard against local infestations.

In planting fall wheat, farmers should observe established fly-free dates for their areas to avoid damage from Hession flies. The dates are available from county agents, or from the VPI Agricultural Extension Service, Blacksburg.

Black widow spiders are beginning to move into basements as a result of the recent cool weather. The bite of black widows is not usually fatal to adults, but causes severe pain, and is sometimes fatal to children. County agents can give control measures. Several species of non-poisonous spiders are also moving into and around buildings.

A flood of calls concerning large congregations of blood-red bugs is due to begin, Morris says. They will be box-elder bugs, which are more easily controlled now than later, after they have hibernated into and under buildings for the winter. Box-elder bugs are harmless, but unpleasant to have around.

Giant Eproean hornets have begun to strip the bark from limbs and twigs of lilacs and other host plants. This happens every year, and plants or limbs will be killed if the hornets girdle them in getting the bark for nests. The hornets can be controlled, and county agents can tell how.

MORE PEOPLE ARE HUNTING AND FISHING

More people are hunting and fishing in Virginia every year. There has been a steady annual increase of about one per cent and in 1955-56 just a shade under a million people bought licenses to hunt and fish in the Old Dominion.

Miss Lillian B. Layne, chief of the Fiscal Division of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, reports that the returns to the Commission from clerks and agents selling hunting and fishing licenses and permits indicated that there was an overall increase in sales for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1956.

There were 539,875 hunting licenses and stamps sold during the year, a total which was 12,636 above that for the previous fiscal year and represented an increase of 1.02 per cent.

A total of 447,037 fishing permits were sold during the past fiscal year. This was 4,405 more, an increase of 1.01 per cent over the year before.

The 986,912 grand total of hunting and fishing license sales, however, does not take into consideration the great number of people, who, for various reasons, are not required to purchase licenses or permits. No licenses are required for those who fish in their own private ponds, nor for children under sixteen nor for the enthusiastic crowd of saltwater fishermen. When we add even the most conservative estimate of those who enjoy this recreation without the need of buying licenses to the number of those who do purchase them, it is easy to come to the conclusion that there are far more people in Virginia who hunt and fish than there are those who don't at some time of the year pack up their gear and take off for the fields and forests, lakes, or streams of our varied state.

SPENT ON VETERANS

The Veterans Administration has published some figures from its latest annual report which are of interest to Virginia citizens. The VA states that $85,909,941 were expended in this state for cash benefits, salaries and services, and miscellaneous costs for veterans and their dependents during the fiscal year 1955, not including a few benefits and services which could not be broken down on a state basis.

The VA also reported that its statistics show Virginia's veteran population numbers 419,000 World War I veterans, 273,000 men who served in World War II, 113,000 veterans of the Korean War, and 2,000 survivors of earlier wars and peacetime service receiving benefits, a total of 437,000.

NEWS from HOLLYWOOD

Joel McCrea's 21-year-old son, Jody, has a good role in "Wings of Eagles," which John Wayne, Dan Dailey and Maureeen O'Hara. Following in dad's footsteps, no doubt.

After Viveca Lindfords finishes her personal appearance tour in behalf of "Halliday Brand," she will take her new husband, George Tabori, to Sweden to meet her family.

The reason United Artists wants a new title for Barbara Stanwyck's newest film, "Love Story," is because it is definitely not a love story and, also, because they can't get clearance for that title.

George Gobel, who spent the summer away from television working on a film in Hollywood, enjoyed the work tremendously. Who wouldn't? His leading lady was Diana Dors whom George described as "England's most famous body since the Rois Royce."

Laraine Day, once a full-time star, is considered the founder of Hollywood's most exclusive legion —that of the "part-time movie star." Laraine has been joined by such famous names as Cary Grant, Bette Davis, Lauren Bacall and Keith Andes. Laraine maintains a healthy family life, does some TV work and appears in movies from time to time. Nice work, if you can get it.

Debra Paget and Cameron Mitchell will co-star with Dick Egan in a post-Civil War story by Bob Buckner, "Reno Brothers."

Contrary to what most people have thought, the studios are finding it easier to recruit new male stars than female actresses. Among the newest actors one finds Paul Newman, Tony Perkins, Don Murray, Leslie Nielsen. Now you name some of the newest actresses.

Rory Calhoun, Vic Morrow and Mary Costa will co-star in "The Big Caper," for Bill Thomas and Howard Pine. Bob Stevens will direct.
